On the lines of the Republican Jewish Coalition (RJC) and other similar bodies, an Indian-American businessman has taken the lead in launching the Republican Hindu Coalition – the RHC.

Shalabh 'Shalli' Kumar addressed the inaugural meeting as the founder of the group, and said there were certain issues and aims the Coalition would work around, and strengthen the bonds between Indo-Americans and rest of the citizens.

"India's economy is growing faster than any other and given its size, such growth has a huge impact on trade and prosperity all over the world. India's position of leadership in the region makes it United States' greatest and most important allies," Mr Kumar underlined.

Several Republicans expressed their wishes towards the coalition. Newt Gingrich, former Speaker of the House of Representative, Pete Sessions, Chairman of House Rules Committee and Senator Mitch McConnell graced the occasion.
